

Science Investigation – Air Resistance

We made two parachutes and the only variable we changed was the size of the parachute. We predicted that the small parachute would fall to the ground more quickly than the large one. The results proved that our predictions were correct because there is less air resistance with the small parachute.

