

In art, we looked at the work of Georges Seurat and how he builds up pictures using tiny dots. This technique is called Pointillism.

We used our sketchbooks to plan the shape and colour of our landscape. Then we used the end of a paintbrush to create printed dots.

We tried to cover as much of the paper as possible and build up different shades of colour.

